Please review attached LegalUpdates case alert regarding high risk stops.

We can discuss more when most of us are together again.

Thanks!

Subject: Recent Case Law Updates and Training

Hi Phil,

I wanted to touch base regarding some recent updates in case law over the past several months, particularly in areas like the 4th Amendment, high-risk traffic stops, use of force (knee to back/neck), and questioning parolees during traffic stops.

I was wondering if the Training Bureau has been issuing any updates related to these topics. If so, would it be possible to include the PD Detective Bureau email group in any future training updates?

One of the recent updates from Aug - September on high-risk traffic stops has sparked a lot of interest and discussion. I've attached a summary for your reference.

Any chance the PD can subscribe to the Briefing Room training videos or something similar?

Thanks and we appreciate any guidance you can provide.

Regards,
Danny

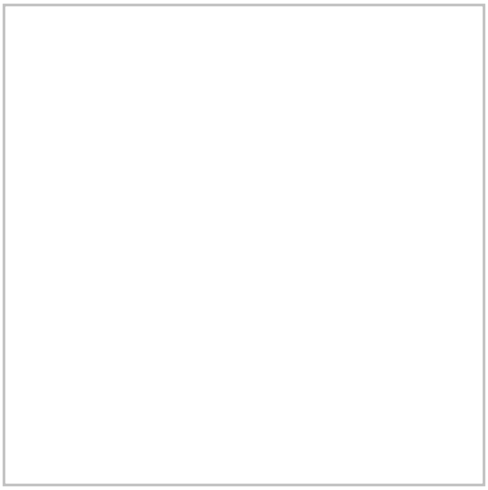
Brand New 9th Circuit Case While working patrol, you stop a vehicle because you suspect it to be stolen. Can you point firearms at the occupants, make them get on the ground, and handcuff them based solely on the vehicle being stolen? The 9th Circuit Court of Appeals gives an opinion in this August 14, 2024 case.

Coming Thursday - 8/22/24



An inmate on a work crew outside of your facility asks to be brought back to observe religious services. Doing so would cause a legitimate security risk. Can you legally deny his request, or is it a violation of his First Amendment rights? Today we look to the United States Supreme Court for guidance.
